Every year at this time your humble servant endeavors to present a picture that will show our position on the map of the business world. To-day we gaze out over rich virgin fields and here and there we find healthy crops of business yielded without the aid of modern cultivating machinery. The area we have to plough is so vast that poor old dobbie passed on along with the long-eared mine mule and the rumbling wagon just as the kerosene lamps flickered out. The Smokeless Farmer sits quietly under the shade of the sturdy oak dreaming of happy days of long ago.

Some day soon, this modern Samson will awaken from his dreams, couple a high speed tractor to a ten point plow and cultivate the entire area East of the Missouri River, and feed into the bins of seventy five millions of people the finest crop of fuel that the world has ever known, and then he will retire in the shade of the old apple tree and often wonder why he did not begin scientific cultivation some forty years ago.

Faithfully yours,
HOLLY STOVER
